

Be a Leader IN EDUCATION

BE INFLUENTIAL.

Are you a licensed elementary or secondary teacher interested in obtaining principal licensure?

As a teacher, you influence your students to achieve academic and personal growth. By earning principal licensure, you can take that influence beyond the classroom and impact the collective success of your fellow educators, school district and community.

The Colorado Department of Education estimates over 40% of our principals will retire in the next decade, creating a critical need for creative educators with strong leadership skills. Coupled with the implementation of SB-191, the Educator Effectiveness Bill, slated for 2013, educated principal candidates with the requisite knowledge to be successful in their role and address new state requirements are in more demand than ever before.

Regis University's College for Professional Studies (CPS) offers an innovative program that gives experienced teachers the opportunity to support school administrations, advance their own careers, and prepare themselves to succeed amidst increased regulations.

The Master of Education - Educational Leadership for Innovation and Change (Principal Licensure) program offers:

- High quality, research-based curriculum designed to encourage responsible leadership
- Field experience and internship activities that connect theory and practice to real-world settings
- A program designed and taught by practicing professionals
- Convenient online and campus-based learning formats

Regis supports licensed teachers by offering a 10% tuition reduction.
